Dear Sir/Madam:

This letter is an appeal to save the Postal Service from Mr. DeJoy and his attempts to further strip it down. For decades, our Postal Service has been the envy of the world and is a national treasure that we need to preserve.

The USPS is relied upon for medicines; unique plants and seeds not to be found in local greenhouses; music, movies, magazines and periodicals not easily obtained outside of specialty bookstores; clothing items too difficult to obtain in small towns or for the homebound; replacement parts for household items; the random, fun "junk" catalog to peruse; or the healing touch of a handwritten sympathy card that one can cherish years after a loss. Stamp collecting is a delightful hobby for many, including ourselves and our children. The tradition of Christmas cards is shrinking, but is one that we do not want to lose forever. And lastly, but not the least, the precious right to vote by mail; something that we engaged in for the first time during the deadly pandemic.

The USPS keeps us connected to the outside world and to one another. Mr. DeJoy fails to understand the breadth and scale of what the USPS means to this nation and he needs to be removed from his position as Postmaster. Additionally, the agency needs to remain apolitical, as it has been for decades. DeJoy has displayed total contempt for the service that he is methodically destroying and he must be stopped.

Most Sincerely,

Nykola Bartkiw
